Executive Director

On behalf of the planning committee of the American Academy of Orofacial Pain's 39th annual scientific meeting, it is my honor to invite you to Denver, Colorado, May 7-10, 2015 for this exciting event. The meeting is entitled "Sleep and Pain: A Translational Approach to Comprehensive Care." It has become very clear that sleep and sleep disorders play a significant role in pain presentations. As pain clinicians, it is imperative that we recognize this relationship in order to better serve our patients. While the topics of sleep disordered breathing and oral appliance therapy will be presented, many presenters will provide a much more comprehensive discussion of the relationships between sleep and pain. Our opening presenters, Doctors Gilles Lavigne and Barry Sessle, have literally "written the book" on the subject. We are also fortunate to have gifted presenters discussing important clinical topics such as nerve blocks for headache disorders, burning mouth syndrome, and painful oral lesions to name but a few. Traditionally, our meeting provides discussion of basic science issues that translate to our clinical practices and this year will be no different. Also, our preconference sessions, breakfast sessions, and lunch sessions will provide an array of topic choices to fill your days.

We are very excited about this meeting. We feel that we have invited the very best presenters in the field and know that you will enjoy the venue of beautiful downtown Denver, Colorado. I look forward to seeing you all soon.

Steven D. Bender, DDS

AAOP President-Elect

Co-chairman of the 2015 AAOP Annual Meeting
